

Antediluvian Lifespans - All but Noah contemporary with Adam

Years since creation, based on Adam's creation as Year 0

Notes: 1. Adam was created, not born (b.). 2) Enoch walked with God and God took him, not died (d.)

Table Explanation:

This table is reckoned from the life of Adam, and the years the Bible give for each persons birth and death.

For example:

- Scripture tells us that Adam was 130 years old when he begat Seth, thus we use 130 (years since creation) for the birth of Seth.
- Scripture tells us that Seth begat Enosh at the age of 105, so we use 105 + Adam's 130 = 235 for the birth year of Enosh.
- Scripture tells us that Seth died at the age of 930, so we use 930 + Adam's 130 = 1042 for the death of Seth.

Antediluvian Population:

If the average family began having children at age 100 and had 6 children in their lifetime, then the mathematical estimate of population would at the time of the flood would be 235 million. This is according to "Babel and the World Population : Biblical Demography and Linguistics" by Henry M. Morris, who considers this to be a conservative (low) estimate.